TONQUE TIED.

How the Phonograph Paralyzes the Speech of Young Ladies.

Yesterday three young ladies called at the APPEAL office to have their voices recorded on the phonograph, so that in after years, their descendants—in case there were any—could recall their language from the dim and mouldy tomb.

The machine was adjusted, the principle explained and all was ready.

"Just place your mouth to that bell shaped tube and talk."

"What 'll I say?"

"Anything you please."

"Shall I holler in it loud?"

"Not just in an ordinary tone, speak plainly and distinctly."

"Then what does it do?"

"It records your speech."

"Oh gracious, must I make a speech, I know I should faint if I did. Here Ella, you try it first."

"All right, I can do it, now just listen."

The confident girl steps up and gets all ready, "Must I put my mouth over the trumpet shaped thing or inside?"

"Keep your mouth inside the tube."

"Don't swallow the tube Ella."

"Ah, you just keep still, I'm getting ready to talk."

"Well, why don't you talk, you've been there five minutes now and haven't said a word in the machine all the time."

"I can't think of any thing to say, it's awful hard to talk in a phonograph the first time you see one, say Nell, you try it, then if you succeed I'll think of something."

The third girl gets her mouth to the tube and there is a dead silence only broken by a gentle swish of the cylinder that keeps going round and round as the recording needle is plowing fine furrows in it.

"Oh gracious, what will I say?"

"Keep your mouth down to the tube. It won't do a thing if you don't. Keep your mouth in the right place, now if you'd had your mouth right it would have taken it down."

"You quit talking and let me think of something. Oh! you hateful things, you talk all the while and don't give me a chance to think. Here Ada, you try it, again, I just can't think of a thing to say."

Once more the first young lady gets down by the machine and makes a desperate effort to say something in the tube, but fails after chatting away at the other girls for several minutes, but always with her mouth away from the tube.

Then one of the others suddenly exclaims:

"Oh! I have it, let me at it quick." She throws herself at the tube and shouts:

"The boy stood on the burning deck,

Eating peanuts by the peck."

"Ah! wasn't that lucky to think of that, just as you did; where did you learn that beautiful piece of poetry?"

"Well, I've recorded my voice, and that's more than either of you have done."

"I am compelled to inform you," says the operator calmly "that you got that into the tube just too late. The needle has run the entire length of the cylinder and gone off the end while you were all talking over what to say."

"I'll plane it down and you can come in some other day when I will be ready with a brand new surface."

Then they all said the machine was a fraud and sailed out.

Tellers Silver Bill.

In the Senate Thursday Senator Teller introduced the following bill as a substitute for Jones' Silver bill:

It provides that any person may deposit at any mint or assay office of the United States either gold or silver bullion, or both, in quantities of not less five ounces of gold or eighty ounces of silver, and demand and receive coin or coin certificates therefor at the rate of $1 in coin or certificates for 25.8-10 grains, Troy weight, of standard gold, and at the rate of $1 in certificates for 412.1-2 grains of standard silver.

It is provided that coin certificates provided for in this act, shall be receivable for all taxes and dues to the United States of every description, and shall be legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private.

Section 2 provides that it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause a sufficient number of coinage certificates of various denominations hereby authorized, to be prepared and distributed among the United States depositories; and to enable them to comply with the provisions of this act, the sum of $50,000 is appropriated to enable the Secretary to prepare and distribute said certificates.

By section 3 the act will take effect thirty days after its passage. The $50,000 appropriation, is however, to be immediately available.

Debating Society Report.

The first regular meeting of the High School Literary society was held at the Public School April 25, 1890. The programme was as follows:

1.—Song by the chorus, entitled "Somewhere."

2.—Declamation, "The Builders," Laura Kelly.

3.—Sketch of Longfellow's Life, Ruth Billings.

4.—Oration, "Progress," Miss Hettie French.

5.—Declamation, "The Angels of Buena Vista," Tracy Barnes.

6.—Instrumental solo, Louise Rinckel.

7.—Essay, "Education," Maud Sterna.

8.—Declamation, "Pyramus and Thisbe," Grace Davis.

9.—Vocal solo, "Till We Meet Again," Gerta Hatch.

11.—Declaration "The Reaper And the Flowers," Ella Foley.

Next came the debate, the question being: "Which have been treated the most cruelly, the Indians or the Negroes?"

Those taking part were Hebert Bicknell, Jessie Fryer, and Sybil Simpson, on the affirmative side, Josie Brulin, Annie Alley and Arthur Latta on the negative.

The decision was in favor of the affirmative.

The exercises were then closed by a song by the class, entitled: "How Can I Leave Thee."

NETTIE SPURGEON.

A FINE LAKE SEASON.

Although the Lake season this year will be short, those who visit it will see the beauties of that locality at their best. The masses of snow will not leave the upper mountains until late in the Fall and some of the ravines will carry the snow over the season. The streams which draw their water from this tremendous supply will be a mass of roaring, tumbling torrents, piled with spray and foam all summer, and teeming with trout, and a delight to the nature-loving tourist. The mountains, the woods and the streams will be more beautiful this season than during the past forty years. The pines irrigated from the exhaustless supply of water will be greener than ever and the cascades in the mountains will be all through the season a grand rush of froth, and foam, white as driven snow and looking as lovely as a mass of crumpled lace around the throat of a Nevada belle. Before long it will be time for the Bay doom sealers and every body else to flee to the mountains and stay there. This of all seasons will be the loveliest witnessed on the Coast for many a year, and the rush of travel promises to be something never known there before.
